

THE HEROIC DEAD.

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the purpose that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The great men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather than to be dedicated to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.—LYNDOLPH.

If the democrats really desire to fight for the presidency they would nominate a live man.

The best criticism of Wagner's music is that it sounds like a Cincinnati riot on a tin roof chased by a Gatling gun.

The musical festival in Chicago is considered by competent critics, to be a much bigger thing than a circus.

The most astonishing news is that within the past twenty-four hours no prominent bank has gone to smash.

The coming national republican convention should put its foot down firmly on the dark-horse business. It is not the way to get a statesman for the presidency.

When the democrats talk of nominating Tilden they think he will let them down easy at the end of the campaign. The Old Cipher would certainly bring them as easy a defeat as any one.

Mr. Peter Kiser and his wife, of Indiana, have been married 42 years, and at the age of 78, he uses for a divorce. It will strike the average reader that it would be better for the aged couple to endure the ills they have a very few years longer, and let death do the separating. Life is too short at nearly four score years, for a husband and wife to quarrel in court.

This is poor consolation for Mr. Schurz, from the Troy (New York) Press, which is democratic. "Carl Schurz threatens to bolt if Mr. Blaine shall be nominated. Hope he won't. He bolted in 1872 and made speeches for the democrats at the rate of $200 per speech, and we then received the worst thrashing we ever had. If he does bolt this time Mr. Schurz will find the democratic door locked because we are not letting in Johnis this year."

Ex-Governor Lucius Robinson, of New York, went over to Gramercy Park the other day and had a talk with Tilden. He says the old Cipher told him that he had no intention of accepting the democratic nomination for president. While he felt grateful for the unanimity with which the democratic party favored his nomination, he did not think that at his time of life and his physical condition he could properly undertake the responsibilities of the presidency. He could not therefore, accept the nomination if it were tendered to him.

The first of the B. O. Red Books for the year is out—that for the republican national convention. The compilation is out of the usual order in political text-books, and covers ground as to party history and controversies that few other text-books cover. There are very few figures, and the side-notes in bold type lead to ready reference to an extensive combination of valuable data. It can not but be a very desirable little book as the campaign progresses, and a 2-cent stamp enclosed to C. K. Lord, Baltimore, will secure a copy.

The greatest terror to the United States government is the heathen Chinese. At the exhibition at New Orleans next winter which is intended to display the industrial, artistic and social advancement of the world in general and of the United States in particular, the Chinese government proposed to put on exhibition a silk loom in operation, and send Chinamen to operate it. This scared our government, and after much dallying, the state department has finally decided that the Chinese may come to the exhibition at New Orleans if they will promise to go as soon as the exhibition is over. When a Chinese silk weaver is forbidden to add the product of skilled industry to the common wealth of this country, it is a sad commentary on the statesmanship of the period!

Senator Palmer, of Michigan, gives the most elaborate dinners in Washington. His income is princely, and there is no one to spend it but he and his wife, and they find it difficult to dispose of his yearly dividends. He keeps one house in Detroit, another in New York and a third in Washington, and finds satisfaction in entertaining his friends. His hobby is dogs. One pet cost him $1,000 and another $500, which was about $250 a pound. The senator has the finest cook in Washington, a Frenchman named Emile, to whom he pays $2,500 a year for baking his griddle cakes, and he has another man, at wages of $50 a month, who does nothing but look after the dogs. Such a man doesn't know much about the glory, the satisfaction and the blessedness of toiling, sweating, scrimping and planning for one's daily bread.

The tail of the democratic ticket may become the head of the kite, should the democrats win the election, and for that reason it is commonly supposed that Mr. Hendricks, in view of Mr. Tilden's precarious condition, is willing to concede the past, and work for the "old ticket." But the Philadelphia Press reports a growing sentiment among the democratic leaders that it will be just as well to leave Mr. Hendricks at home. Moreover, it is suspected that the head of the old ticket is not so closely attached to the tail as to make their separation a dangerous experiment. On the other hand there is a fight in Indiana between Hendricks and McDonald, which is full of bitterness, and should either be taken for the tail of the ticket, the other would feel aggrieved, and the result would cost the democrats thousands of votes in Indiana. So whichever way the democrats turn they are confronted with a perplexity.

The state democratic convention, held at Madison on Wednesday, elected the following delegates-at-large, to the national convention:

William F. Vilas, Madison.
James G. Jenkins, Milwaukee.
Edward S. Dragg, Fond du Lac.
J. M. Morrow, Sparta.

The delegates to the national convention are as follows:

First district—James R. Doolittle, of Racine and Anson Rogers, of Rock.
Second district—A. K. Delaney, of Dodge, and Charles Foster, of Washington.
Third district—D. S. Rose, of Lafayette, and R. M. Bashford, of Dane.
Fourth district—John Black and Chas. F. Freeman, of Milwaukee.
Fifth district—A. L. Gray, of Brown, and Carl Zieller, of Sheboygan.
Sixth district—G. W. Pratt, of Winnebago, and George Kraus, of Outagamie.
Seventh district—J. W. Lusk, of Sauk, and J. L. R. McCallum, of Richland.
Eighth district—W. H. Smith, of Dane, and G. Y. Freeman, of Trempealeau.
Ninth district—Alex. Brazee, of Oconto, and L. Macchitto, of Madison.

The platform is the same old story—the same whine and morbid complaint that has been in democratic plattforms ever since the party got whipped down south twenty years ago. The democracy might possibly claim a little honor and some respect, if it would for once put something fresh and seasonable in its plattforms.

One of the conspicuous men in the democratic state convention at Madison was ex-Senator James R. Doolittle, of Racine and Chicago. He attends all the democratic conventions with the hope of getting some of the crumbs that fall from the political table, but he gets very few and is never satisfied. He has been trying for fifteen years to get back in public life, but each attempt meets with failure. James R. Doolittle sowed political treachery, and is now reaping his reward. During the Andy Johnson debauched administration, Doolittle forsook the republican party. He thought he foresaw that the coming party in this nation was the democratic party. He imagined that the republican party was going under, that Johnson's administration would be popular, that he would carry tens of thousands of republicans with him, and Doolittle wanted to place himself on the loaded wagon and become the most conspicuous figure in the reorganized democracy. It wasn't long before Judge Doolittle saw that his party treachery was going to bear bitter fruit. The Johnson movement felt still-born, and when the election of 1868 came, Doolittle, Trumbull, and a score of others who betrayed their party for much less than thirty pieces of silver, went down in the general wreck. Since then they have been kept down. Not one of them has been able to redeem himself. All of them have been browbeaten about the democratic camp since that time, but not one has been elevated by the democracy in public life. Since Judge Doolittle sold himself to the democratic party, his political life has been a miserable failure. The democrats give him shelter, but no food, and to-day he is hardly anything more than a political pauper. Thirty years ago Judge Doolittle had a bright future. The republican party had placed him in the United States senate. There his speeches in defense of "Bleeding Kansas," made him distinguished. He was among the ablest members of the senate, and in ability and loyalty was an honor to the state and his party. But in an evil day his ambition warped his judgment, he thought more of James R. Doolittle's personal aggrandizement than he did of his party, and from that hour his political fate was sealed, and since has never been able to re-enter public life. His career teaches an important lesson to the young men of this country who are seeking political preferment.

The Record in Congress.

WASHINGTON, CITY, May 29.—The senate took up the Mexican war pension bill, and struck out the proposed amendment to require its benefits to those dependent on their labor or the aid of civil or military services. In the house of representatives, a bill was reported to forfeit the unearned land grant of the Atlantic & Pacific road. The legislative appropriation bill, which reduces the internal revenue collection districts from eighty-four to sixty-three, was considered for the remainder of the day and at the evening session.

Murdered for His Money.

St. Louis, May 29.—The body of John Gooding, a farmer, living two miles from St. Louis, Delaish county, was found in a "cypress" cave on his farm with the head beaten to a jelly. The club with which the murder had been committed was lying near by. Gooding was a bachelor, and was supposed to have considerable money and jewelry. It was doubtless killed for his valuables. There is no clue to the murderer.

BOILED TO DEATH.

A Chicago Man's Frightful Death in a Soap Factory Vat.

He Falls Into a Caldron of Boiling Grease and Dies Instantly—Recovery of the Body.

CHICAGO, May 29.—A fatal accident, horrible in its details, occurred at William H. Scoville's soap factory, 40 Fulton street, resulting in the death of the proprietor. A part of the soap-making apparatus consists of two large vats, each twenty feet in diameter and seven feet deep. These vats are used to boil the grease from which soap is made. At the time the catastrophe happened Mr. Scoville and his son, William A. Scoville, were standing near the vats, engaged in conversation. Both of the men were wearing nearly full of boiling-hot fat. One of them boiled over, its contents flying up to the ceiling and running over the floor. Mr. Scoville ran away to escape the hot grease and vapor, with which the room was filled. He thought he was blinded by the flying particles—at all events, in his haste to get away ran he straight toward the other vat, and tumbled into its seething contents. He sank to the bottom instantly, and no doubt was before he was roasted to death. The grease, with which the vat was filled, was drawn off as quickly as possible, but the process occupied over an hour, and when the body was found it was parboiled, but not grossly disfigured. The body was taken to the morgue in the Delaplane street patrol wagon, to be cleansed of the slimy substance clinging to it, and from there was removed to the home of deceased, 223 Irving place. Mr. Scoville was 61 years old. He had been engaged in the manufacture of soap in this city for many years, and it is said, acquired considerable wealth. When his son was notified the family of the terrible fate that had overtaken him, a heartrending scream issued. Mrs. Scoville fainted outright, and remained unconscious for some time, while the other members of the family were deeply affected. The present Mrs. Scoville is the second wife of the deceased, to whom she has been married about four years. The children of the first marriage were grown to maturity. Miss Kitty Scoville is a teacher in the King public school, near the corner of Western avenue and Harrison street.

The sportsmen now in the city in attendance on the tournament held a brief meeting at the Palmer to take action regarding the formation of a National Sportsmen's association. This committee will meet at another meeting Friday night at the Palmer, when the association will be formed.

SMALL-POX IN LONDON.

One Thousand Cases in One District—A Threatened Mob!

LONDON, May 29.—There are a thousand cases of small-pox in the Hackney district, a northern suburb of this city. The disease is on the increase. While some bodies of the dead were being carted away in vans in the middle of the night a mob of people terrified at the frequency of the deaths, gathered and assembled and threatened violence, but were restrained by the police who were escorting the vans. The district has been black-flagged and isolated.

Desired to Elevate the Press.

WARREN, Ind., May 29.—Consideration of a sensation was caused at Xenia, thirteen miles southwest of this city, Saturday afternoon, by the discovery, under The Journal office, of a half pound of dynamite, which was attached a three-foot fuse. Who placed it there no one knows, though the proprietors of The Journal say that they suspect a person whose identity they have incurred. It is believed it was the intention to wait until the Journal office was closed, and then to light the fuse. A diligent search will be made to ferret out the guilty ones.

Not McKean Acquitted.

CHICAGO, May 29.—A vast crowd assembled in the criminal court-room to learn the result of the McKean trial. The jury had agreed only in the morning and the verdict was not given. Judge Anthony expressed the hope that the audience would make no demonstration over the verdict, but when the acquittal was announced the floor shook with applause. The accused was permitted to hold a reception, when he was returned to his cell to await trial on an indictment for the murder of Mrs. Wilson.

Another Lost Girl Found.

BALTIMORE, May 29.—Miss Kate Medinger, whose disappearance on Thursday last had excited considerable interest, has been found. Her father and brother and the authorities have been engaged in a thorough search, and found her near Phoenix, on the Northern Central railroad, and brought her to her home in this city. The girl had secured employment with a farmer. A reporter was not permitted to see her, but was informed that she was out of her mind.

CRIME IN KENTUCKY.

Dr. Scott's Worst Piece of Work—A Brave United States Marshal.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 29.—Curry Head, the wife of Stewart Best, who recently died at Nicholasville, Ky., and was a lunatic, his stomach distended, and arsenic found, is a trial before the county court for poisoning her husband. Her father-in-law testified that his son said he thought his wife was poisoning him and refused to take anything she gave him. She, however, succeeded in getting him to drink from a jug of milk, which he drank. Witness was at the time waiting on his son, Dr. Pators, chemist at the state college, testified to finding arsenic in the dead man's stomach and liver. The defense will try to prove that the deceased was in the habit of taking arsenic.

W. R. Kellian, a deputy marshal for a number of years, was shot and killed by moonshiners near London, Ky., Saturday. The party intended themselves in a grocery store and made defiance to the officers, leveling their guns through the windows at the attacking party. Wolfman bravely led the attack and was shot with a double-barreled shotgun fired from a window. Although sustaining a terrible and fatal wound, he drew his pistol and fired three shots at the window where his murderers were, and though suffering greatly from loss of blood he led his posse against the enemy and succeeded in capturing three of them. The grocer, J. H. Kane, went down and expired immediately. The three men arrested were James Sparks, James Hodges and W. R. Hodges. They are now in jail at London.

Wants $25,000 Damages.

BROOKLYN, May 29.—Mr. Edward W. Edwards has commenced an action in the King's county supreme court against Henry W. Nichols, to recover $25,000 damages from him for the alleged alienation of the affections of his wife. The plaintiff is a private detective and the defendant is said to be a wealthy man owning a handsome residence on the Hudson. Edwards asserts that the defendant is now living in adultery with his wife, but the defendant puts in a general denial, and also asserts that this is simply a blackmailing scheme. When the case was called defendant's counsel moved to have the case put off until fall, upon the ground that the material witness was sick and unable to be present. Judge Cullen said he would allow the case to remain on the term calendar, but that there might be a stipulation that the evidence of the sick witness be taken before a referee. If the defendant failed to do this, then some other arrangement might be made between the parties.

Discussing the Scott Lignar Law.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 29.—Judge Burke and Hon. W. H. West finished their arguments before the supreme court on the Scott law case at noon. Judge West, for the law, made the points that the tax paid under the law was not a license, as it did not legalize a business already recognized in law as legal. He also said, in conclusion, that if the court would not protect the people the time would come when the people would protect themselves. Judge Burke, in closing the argument for the liquor dealers, said the difference between the Scott and Bond law was but slight, if it existed at all, the only difference being in the security required, the Bond law asking a bond and the Scott law the latter requiring a license. He said the latter was a case of malpractice. Defendant attended Mrs. Denis for illness, and after ascribing to her several different diseases, ordered her to be swathed from head to foot in keroline bandages. The effect was like that of fire to entirely destroy the outer skin. On his second visit he caused keroline to be poured on the bandages, without removing them to see the effect of his treatment. The patient suffered torments at first, but not so much in the second application because sensitiveness had been destroyed. The woman soon died. Several of the doctor's patients testified that they had used keroline blisters with excellent effect, but the jury was out only ten minutes.

The Jury Was Out Only Ten Minutes.

WORCESTER, Mass., May 29.—Dr. Franklin Pierce has been found guilty of manslaughter in the superior criminal court here. This was a case of malpractice. Defendant attended Mrs. Denis for illness, and after ascribing to her several different diseases, ordered her to be swathed from head to foot in keroline bandages. The effect was like that of fire to entirely destroy the outer skin. On his second visit he caused keroline to be poured on the bandages, without removing them to see the effect of his treatment. The patient suffered torments at first, but not so much in the second application because sensitiveness had been destroyed. The woman soon died. Several of the doctor's patients testified that they had used keroline blisters with excellent effect, but the jury was out only ten minutes.

The Congregationalists.

BOSTON, May 29.—The American Congregational union has opened its annual meeting. The report shows that the churches of the order in New York number about 200; in New Jersey, 30; Michigan, 240; Ohio, 230; Illinois, 230; Iowa, 140; Kansas, 220; Minnesota, 150; Nebraska, 100; Dakota, 55; Oregon, 30; and California, 100. In 1,200 towns west of the Mississippi river, there is no Protestant preaching. The Home missionary society is aiding missionaries to occupy that field. In Minnesota there are now eighty churches without a sanctuary, and there are 700 regularly organized congregational churches in the country that have no more houses of worship. Last year over $100,000 was raised for the churches.
